OUR HISTORY

The Blackie Boy dates back as far as 1771, when it was known as The Black Boy Inn and referred to by locals as 'The Blackie Boy'. It was frequented by such dignitaries as the Burgesses of the Town who often banqueted at the Inn.

The pub was a favourite haunt of the famous engraver Thomas Bewick, who belonged to a debating club, known as 'Swarleys Club' named after the Inns proprietor, Richard Swarley. Which met there during the late 18th Century. Every member of this club had to behave as a true gentleman and if not were fined and dismissed from the club immediately.

The Inn came to its name through an association with the local Blacksmith, whose business was housed in the adjoining back lane. To this day the lane is still officially recognised as the 'Black Boy Yard'.
